SYNTHETIC TEST DOCUMENT — NOT A REAL RECORD

Synthetic Customer-Service Email Thread

All names, addresses, amounts, events, references and communications below are invented solely for software testing. No logo or official branding is used.

Thread context

Case reference: SIM-CASE-2601
Customer: Mira Sen
Product/model: Sony WHM1000X wireless headphones / WHM1000X
All mailboxes and people are fictional; timestamps use IST (UTC+05:30).

22 March 2025, 09:12 IST — From Mira Sen to help@northloop.example.invalid

Subject: Fault returned after second visit
The headphones have started switching off again after about two minutes of playback. The second visit was job SIM-JOB-250318-B; the earlier visit was SIM-JOB-250203-A. Please review both repairs and let me know a clear warranty resolution proposal. I can provide the invoice and job sheets.

22 March 2025, 10:04 IST — From Ishan Rao, fictional case representative

Subject: Re: Fault returned after second visit
Hello Mira, we acknowledge your report that the same power-off fault returned after the second repair. We have opened simulated case SIM-CASE-2601. Please send the purchase invoice, illustrative coverage certificate, and both repair job sheets so our fictional review team can assess the record and prepare a clear proposal. This acknowledgement is not an acceptance of liability or a decision on coverage.

22 March 2025, 10:26 IST — From Mira Sen

Subject: Re: Fault returned after second visit
Understood. The relevant references are invoice SIM-INV-250114-017, job SIM-JOB-250203-A, and job SIM-JOB-250318-B. I am attaching the available documents for this test case.